Democrats and Popuiists to Work Together

To Secure a County Ticket.

Special Officer Has An Exciting Time With a CroWd of Finlanders-Other News.

The leader of the democratic and populist parties in this county are agreed to make a combine on the county ticket. Counting on the yote in the fall of 1892 and making no allowance for the natural increase, the combine would, by no means, be insignificant. The total in 1892 was 7,235, of which the republican ticket polled 3,321, the democratic ticket 2,639 and the populist 745. If no vote had been lost from the very reason of ombining such a wave would have been then successful. Two years ago the vote was entirely different. The total vote was 6,587, of which the republican ticket polled 3,734, the democratic 1,358 and the populist 671. The figurers are confident that the vote will more nearly approximate that of 1892, which was a presidential year, than that of 1894, an off year when there was a landslide all over the country and many democrats stayed at home. They notice that the republican vote did not increase much, but that 1,300 democrats evidently remained at home. However, those that question the sucess of the democrat-populist-union-silver party, aver that there will be many democrats that will not swallow the dose prepared and will vote the county ticket in harmony with the sound money republican ticket. Four years ago many democrats would not have countenanced fusion with populists and they will not now. Then again the number of voters in the county besides the natural increase of young men who will this fall cast their first vote will be increased by about 1,000 naturalized citizens, 750 of whom may be safely counted to vote the republican ticket. This is the situation. Republicans are confident of carrying the entire county ticket with a good majority for State and national tickets while the democrats and populists think they have a fighting chance.

> The owner of the Ida May informs us that it was his boat and not the Viking, as stated in the report of the races which appeared in the News last evening, which crossed the line without having here sail reefed, that she started and sailed the entire course under full sail. We have not been able to hear from Mr. Hicok since speaking to the owner of the Ida May, but no doubt he was mistaken in the boat; do not know what time the race took place-wonder whether it was after 4 o'clock.-ED.

William P. Kibbee, well known in this county for various reasons, has branched out as a special writer. In the Scientific American of September 19 he has commenced an article on the Calumet and Hecla mine. It is illustrated by a view of the Red Jacket shaft tailbouse, an underground scene and a view of one of the big hoisting engines. Kibbee is now employed by the Rand Drill Co. of Chicago.

Chris Rath, a special officer of Hough ton, had quite an adventure with a gang of Finns yesterday morning. The Finns had built a big fire near the old Cleaves' foundry building in West Houghton and Rath went over and ordered them away, when, for reply, the Finns drew a revolver. The officer finally took the revolver away and landed two of the men in jail.

The Magnetism of Rome.

The attraction of such a church as is hat of Rome is partially, no doubt, an imaginative attraction, but not purely one of the imagination. Even Dr. Mar tineau, whose point of view has been so different that he regards apostolic authority itself as by no means final, has described the Church of Rome as "the missionary of nations, the associate of history, the patron of art, the van-quisher of the sword." And yet he would admit no final authority at all in the degmatic decisions of a church which he so describes and would make very light of his episcopal lineage. Newman and Manning were neither of them overwhelmed by the more imagi-native grandeur of the church's history. But they both came to believe that no one generation of Christians could rightly emancipate themselves from the guidance of all previous generations of Christians on the strength of a new study of the Scripture or a just indiguation at the depth of come of the prac-tical corruptions of a church.

They were in search of an authority at once in lineal connection with the church of the apostles and full of visible life and energy at the present day. They thought that the Anglican church could hardly claim anything like continuity with the church of the apostles, and that the Greek church could hardly claim sufficient independence of state life, or, indeed, sufficient vitality and energy, to mark it out as an institution of the first order of originality and influence at the present day.-London Spectator.

He Got the Quarter. He had deposited his ticket in the box on the down town station the Sixth avenue "L" road at Fiftieth street and was counting his change in a search for plugged dimes and nickels. A quarter fell from his hands and rolled along the platform until it lodged under the raised steps which form the edge of the platform. There it lay in plain view, but as unobtainable as the golden apples of Hesperides. The loser was the picture he wailed. "I've got 'em to burn, but it just makes me mad to see that quarter there, and I can't get it."

"Gimme a dime, mister," said a messenger boy, 'and 5 cents for ex-penses, and I'll get yer mun." The man regarded the boy for a mo ent and said, "Go ahead." He returned in a few minutes with his form working convulsively. In his hand he had a piece of scantling. The crowd watched him enriously. From his mouth the boy took a well masti-cated wad of chewing gum. He stuck this on the end of the scantling, and, thrusting the stick through the narrow space, pressed the soft and sticky gum firmly on the lost coin. Then he deftly drew it out and presented the money to 'Keep the whole outfit," said the man. "Boy, you're a peach. We live and learn," and he bearded a train, his face wreathed in smiles. The face of the boy was similarly decorated. - New York Mail and Express.

The stock illustration of what a fool will do is the habit which ostriches have of sticking the head into the sand, leaving the body exposed, but the author of "The Gold Diggings of Cape Horn" says that this habit does not seem foolish to one who studies the estrich in its desert home. On the contrary, it is nature's wise provision for the safety of the bird in a region where hiding places are scarce.

The male ostrich hatches out the eggs, looks after the brood, keeps his eyes open for men, beasts and birds, and sounds a loud snorting, warning call when he sees an enemy. The brood, when warned, fades out of sight. Each chick squats motionless, its head in the sand, and its body so near in color to that of the sand and scant herbage as to deceive even an experienced hunter.

Its body looks like a gray desert bush, and the gauchos-the cowboys of the pampas-when searching for young ostriches examine every bush within many pears. Often what seemed a bush is found to be in part or wholly a young ostrich. With its head up the bird would be at once detected. With its head in the sand, it often escapes even the keen eyed fox.

"Do you notice how much the practice of carrying the hands in the pocket has been given up by all classes of men within the last few years?" asked the literary man. "It was never good form, but still you would often see it. I think the newsboys are responsible for the change. Put your hand in your pocket as you stand for an instant on the street me day and see if you don't agree with me. If you are anywhere in the lower or central portion of the city there will be from one to a dozen or more newsboys in sight. Every one of them will notice the motion of your hand in your pocket, and if one is looking in mother direction be is attracted by the rush of his fellows, and you are surrounded by a struggling mass of boys, and as many papers as there are urchins are thrust into your face. It is a dangerous thing to put your hand to your pocket unless you are willing to have your progress delayed for a minute or two, "—New York Times.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XIII, THIRD QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, SEPT. 27.

A Comprehensive Review of the Quarter's Lessons - Golden Text, Prov. zvill, 10. Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I .- David, King of Judah (II Sam. II, 1-11). Golden Text, Ps. zevii, 1, The Lord reignoth; let the earth rejoice The Golden Text points onward to the time when the kingdom shall come and the Lord shall reign, as stated more fully in Dan. vii, 18, 14, 27; Rev. xi, 15. The death of Saul and David's being anointed death of Saul and David's being anointed king over Judah were a foreshadowing of the beginning of the reign of Christ. The reign of Ish-bosheth, David's enemy, over Israel for a time is suggestive of the enemies who shall continue even after the beast, or antichrist, shall have gone to the lake of fire.

LESSON II.—David, King Over All Israel (II Sam. v, 1-12). Golden Text, II Sam. v, 10, "David went on and grew great, and the Lord God of Hosts was with him."

v. 10, "David went on and grew great, and the Lord God of Hosts was with him." The Son of David, the Lord Jesus Christ, will surely, in due time, reign over all is-rael (Ezek. xxxvii, 21-24), and they will be a righteous nation (Isa. Ix. 21). He will also be King of Kings and Lord of Lords (Rev. xix, 16) on the whole earth. He is patiently waiting His time. Let us meekly and cheerfully wait with Him and daily keep "Going and Growing" (verse 10, margin).

margin). Lesson III.—The Ark Brought to Jeru salem (II Sam. vi, 1-12). Golden Text, Ps. lxxxiv, 12, "O Lord of Hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in Thee!" It was David's way to inquire of the Lord in all matters, but he, like us, sometimes failed to do so and leaned upon his own understanding, or did as others. In this case he imitated the Philistines and got understanding, or did as others. In this case he imitated the Philistines and got into serious trouble.

LESSON IV.—God's Promises to David (II Sam. vii, 4-16). Golden Text, Ps. lxxi, i. 'In Thee, O Lord, do I put my trust!" When David was quiet in his kingdom and dwelling peacefully in his own house of cedar, it troubled him that the ark of God should be in a tent, and he thought to build a house for the ark. God, however, had other thoughts, for He says, "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord" (Isa. lv. 8). His are as far above ours as heaven above earth, and He surprised David by the plans He had for him.

LESSON V.—David's Kindness (II Sam. ix, 1-13). Golden Text, Rom. xii, 10, "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love." David continued to presper, reigning over all Israel, executing judgment and justice, and he was preserved wherever he went (chapter viil, 14, 15). He has nothing but forgiveness in his beaut for his combine.

ed whorever he went (chapter vill, 14, 15). He has nothing but forgiveness in his heart for his onemies, and, for Jonathan's sake, seeks to find any of the house of Saul that he may show them the kindness of God. May we, like Mephibosheth, dweli in Jerusalem (cliy of peace) and eat continually at the King's table.

LESSON VI.—David's Victories (II Sam. x, 8-19). Golden Text, Ps. xxvil, 1, "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear." This is the record of one of the Lord's victories for David, in which 40,700 Syrians were slain. When Israel walked with God, there was no king or people who could stand against them, for the Lord fought for them, but when they failed to walk with Him He allowed their enemies to prosper and overcome them.

failed to walk with Him He allowed their enemies to prosper and overcome them. We would have more victories over our enemies, the world, the flesh and the devil, if we relied upon the Lord to fight for us, remembering "Thine is the power."

LESSON VII.—David's Confession and Forgiveness (Ps. xxxii, 1-11). Golden Text. Ps. ii, 10, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me!" There is nothing more dangerous than ease and idleness, for then the devil is very busy. David in time of war was at home at ease when he was led into this great sip, and there was no peace to him till it was confessed and forgiven. One has said that confession is the lance which relieves the festering wound. If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness, but whose covereth his sins shall not prosper (I John I, 8-10; Prov. xxvIII, 13);

Lesson VIII.—Absalom's Rebellion (II Sam. xv, 1-12). Golden Text, Ex. xx, 12; "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." It does not seem possible that a son could treat his father as Absalom treated David, treat his father as Absalom treated David, and yet it is but a sample of our treatment of God. He says, "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me" (Isa. 1, 2). And long afterward he had to say, "If, then, I be a father, where is mine honor?" (Mal. 1, 6). As to our Lord Jesus, we know that His own to whom He came, instead of receiving Him, they killed Him.

LESSON IX.—Absalom's Defeat and Death (II Sam. xviii, 9-17, 32, 33). Golden

Lesson 1X.—Absalom's Defeat and Death (II Sam. xviii, 9-17, 32, 33). Golden Text, Ps. i, 6, "The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish." Who can tell what it means to perish? It is not the death of the body, for we are told not to fear that, but it is the destruction of body and soul in hell, where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. Math. x, 28; Mal. ix, 44. David would gladly have died for his confer he was ready to meet God, but son, for he was ready to meet God, but Absalom was not. See how in due time Absalom was not. See how in due time the transgressor is sure to come to his end.

LESSON X.—David's Love For God's House (I Chron. xxii, 6-16). Golden Text, Ps. lxxxiv, 4: "Blessed are they that dwell in Thy house. They will be still praising Thee." The Lord Jesus is the true Solomon, Prince of Peace, and Jedidiah, beloved of the Lord (verse 9 and II Sam. xii, the true half is a state of the lord (verse 9 and II Sam. xii.) loved of the Lord (verse 9 and II Sam. XI, 25), for where He reigns there shall be peace and quietness unto Israel. The pros-perity of Solomon's reign is very sugges-tive of the glorious millennial days that are coming, while the time of David is rather suggestive of the beginning of those days. Lesson XI.—David's Gratitude to God (II Sam. xxii, 40-51). Golden Text, II Sam. xxii, 2, "The Lord is my rock and my fortress and my deliverer." Whether it was the words that David wrote as the it was the words that David wrote as the sweet psalmist of Israel (chapter xxiii, 1-2) or the victories he gained over his enemies (verse 41), he acknowledged that it was all of God, who girded him with strength. LESSON XII.—Destructive Vices (Prov.

"There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." Man's way is to live unto himself (verse 26), and then he is of course at strife with all who come in his way or interfere with him. The godly man is humble, unselfish, seeks not his own and lives unto God if only he may honor Him. With him the work of righteousness is peace and assurance forever (Isa. xxxii. 17).

A lobster's legs, all told, are ten in number, but only eight of these are largely used for walking. The front pair, or big claws, have been specialized, as in the crab, and most others of the higher crustaceans, into prehensile or-gans for catching and crushing the prey. Their use is obvious. Lobsters feed largely off mollusks of various sorts and other hard shelled marine animals. In order to be able to break or crush the shells of these and so to get at the soft-er flesh within they have acquired such large and very muscular nippers or pinchers. That is not all, however. Not only have the two front legs been differentiated and specialized from the eight others in this manner, but also, by a rare exception to the symmetry of the body, the right claw has been specialized from the left, each being intended to perform a distinct function. One is a scissors, the other is a mill; one is a cutter, the other is a cracker.

As a rule, the right claw is the slen-derer and longer. It has toothlike projections or serrated edges on its nipping faces, and it is rather adapted for biting and severing than for crushing or grinding. The left claw, on the other hand, is usually thicker, heavier and rounder. Its muscles are more powerful, and in place of sharp teeth it has blunt tubercles or hammers of different sizes. It acts, in fact, more like a nut cracker than like teeth or a saw. It is a smash-ing organ. Nevertheless you will find it interesting to observe, by noting the lobsters served to you at table, that this differentiation has hardly as yet become quite constant, for sometimes it is the right claw that displays the hammerlike nut cracker type and the left that acts as nipper and biter, while sometimes no difference occurs at all, both claws alike being sharp toothed or blunt hammered in the same specimen,-Longman's

Jay Gould's Nemesia.

I am seated before a blazing fire in the library of a man I see at a glance is book loving as well as book owning man. Near me, by the center table, Jay Gould is seated in a low chair. The shaded lamp throws a flood of light on a book he holds, and also shows in relief against the background of shadow his clear cut features. It is the face of student, and as he turns to answer questions I have asked about the book I find the happiest expression resting on that face. The dark eyes are brimming over with that thoughtful look which shows a free mind and a happy moment. Then suddenly a spasm of pain distorts the face, the eyes close, the book falls from a nerveless hand. For a moment he seems to suffer the torture of the damned. Then he pulls himself together, begs to be excused, and then goes slowly up the broad stair way, to pass a night of anguish.

His Nemesis has struck home-neuralgia, which has traveled with him 40 years-an enemy which all his wealth could not bribe had claimed its pound of flesh. When I heard of how he diedturned his face to the white wall, whis pered "I am so tired, tired," and then slipped into the unknown-this scene ne back to me with new meaning. Gould grabbed for gold-got it. And that was all he did get out of life .-Cornhill Magazine.

Modern Fire Worship In Scotland. Burghead, in Morayshire, is unique in one respect. It has "the burning of the clavic." This ceremony is gone through every New Year's eve, style. It is supposed to be a relic of fire worship. There is now only one other community, it is said, in Britain where the practice is carried on. The clavic consists of half an Archangel tar barrel fixed on the top of a fir prop about four feet long. The second half of the tar barrel is broken up, put inside and mixed with tar. A stone must be used to knock in the nail which connects the pole and the barrel. The bro ken bits in the barrel are then lighted by means of burning peat, no such thing as a lucifer match being allowed.

For over 50 years the clavic has been made by the same man, and one particular townsman has provided the peat for 40 years. In the dark winter night the blazing thing is borne up one street and down another at high speed then carried to the Doorie hill in the middle of the village. Here the pole is fixed on a short, strong column, and the clavie burns cut. The women rush in, and, picking bits of the now dying elavie to "keep the witches away," dis-appear into the darkness. — Glasgow Herald.

cross the two channels and the North sea probably dates back to very ancient times. In the days when England was a province of France, and during the later period when France was a province of England, the need of a channel for regular correspondence must have made itself irresistibly felt; and even after the loss of Calais the long presence of English troops and English agents in the Low Countries called for almost as constant means of communication with The service probably made a great

Still the system was not extended outside the narrow seas either during Cromwell's reign or that of his successor. The need for such ex-tension became pressing only through the growth of our colonial possessions
